

ABOUT FORA

Fora is an informal adult education association that focuses on combining learning and creativity. We are comprised of both large and small associations and adult education institutions across the country.

Our courses and activities cover topics such as creative crafts, health education and exercise, music and arts, language education, and cultural as well as debate events.

We are an informal adult education association with a perspective on the world that entails commitment and a sense of responsibility. Therefore we facilitate several international projects in which knowledge and abilities are exchanged and taught across borders. Visit our website for more information on these projects.

Fora is determined to ensure the foundation for creativity and learning. Opportunities that enable commitment and responsibility. We strive for adult education that creates change in society by constantly remaining relevant both for the individual, and for society at large.

INFORMAL ADULT EDUCATION FOR THE WORLD

Commitment and responsibility are key issues. Not just to the individual, but for the community as well. Strengthening and educating the individual also strengthens the community. When we commit to each other, and we spend our time together, the community we are a part of, is strengthened.

This is what drives us. This is what we labor for.

We do our utmost to make sure that adult education remains relevant in society. We relate our work to how the Danes live their lives, both their everyday lives, as well as their lives as citizens of the world. We offer education, activities and experiences that enable valuable, meaningful learning. We are committed and enthusiastic. Our focus is centered on bringing people together, as well as community building.

We value the closeness of human relations in all aspects of community building. Our trademark is relatability. Our members learn the value of being relatable, of being active participants in society rather than passive bystanders. This brings joy to the people involved – and we are proud of that. We are represented and active across the country, both in the large cities and in small rural communities. We believe in local initiatives and a commitment to local society.

Our subject knowledge is our strength. Our courses and activities are characterized by quality and committed educators. People who are passionate about their subject matter, and about teaching others. We emphasize the societal aspects of what we teach, regardless of what the subject matter is.

We cultivate arts and crafts as a source of creativity and development. And we have a great love for the community that arises out of coming together to create.

We challenge conventional thinking, and we strive to relate our courses to new developments. We offer the space and support needed for initiative.

That is why we endorse and develop new forms of education, and we use new knowledge and technology to further new ways of community building. All in the pursuit of creating the best possible opportunities to facilitate learning and community.
